

Ishvari was raised in the capital of Skeltand, Sol. Ishvari was found abandoned one night in an alley of Sol, and adopted by Irstan and Cora Stidz. Irstan and Cora cared for and raised Ishvari as were she their own child, since Irstan and Cora many years now have been unable to conceive a child. When Ishvari was found, the only other object with her was a letter. The letter stated that her name was Ishvari and that her family's protector spirit Ish would watch over her no matter how tough life would get for her.

As so Ishvari grew up with loving parents, but it was clear she was not exactly like others, as her eyes would sometimes light up and if she focused she could make others perceive words she wanted them to hear. Though Ishvari never really understood who she was or where she came from, she was content with her life as it was.

Other than her parents Ishvari also formed a strong bond with her family spirit Ish, though not being able to communicate they were able to kind of understand each other, and Ish would always be there for Ishvari.

She also grew up with her best friend since childhood, a boy named Frem one year older than she was. Ishvari ended up falling for him when she was about 20, but a relationship never formed, since love was a new concept for her, and one year after she developed these feelings, Frem at the age of 22 drew out on adventure, for he could not be held down by the city he grew up in. Ishvari did not know where he went, but had taken an interest in adventuring herself after hearing Frem's admiration for it.

From the age of 16, Ishvari became an apprentice of a courtier and worked on becoming one herself, during this apprenticeship under her master Odvon, she learned a great deal about internal affairs and relationships between important people. Ishvari also developed a certain skill for persuading and deceiving after having observed it for years.

After 7 years of apprenticeship when Ishvari was 23 she officially became courtier in Sol herself and deepened her understanding of internal affairs and such. Though she began to feel restless being a courtier and wanted to study a wider variety of things and experiment with what could become her true calling.

One day in the government study she felt a certain pull on her towards a specific book, she opened and studied it, but had a hard time understanding it. Though she could make out some kind of ritual, which she decided to try out for herself. With this ritual she summoned an Archfey that took a peculiar liking to Ishvari after all but one glance at her. Ishvari was offered power, but in turn she would allow the Archfey to observe her, and sometimes make requests of Ishvari for the Archfey's benefit. The ever so curious Ishvari decided on taking this one in a lifetime opportunity and signed a contract with the archfey.

Ishvari could feel a new power she did not fully comprehend, and after a couple of months of learning about the fey world to maybe someday find out who exactly her patron was, and training to understand her new powers, she finally decided on drawing out on adventure.

Her reason was primarily because she did not fully understand herself, she knew she was different, but not how. Hopefully she would be able to learn about her family and maybe even meet her biological parents. But that was not the only motivation, other than that was the curiosity of the world, and of her own patron and how her powers worked. And maybe this could give Ishvari a sliver of a chance to meet up with her childhood friend and first love Frem again.

As so Ishvari set out on adventure at the age of 24.